

Building Leadership Capital

Provided by DeakinPrime, the corporate education arm of Deakin University

How can organisations ensure that their leaders are able to meet emerging demands?

Today's leaders face unprecedented and complex demands. They must negotiate a profoundly interconnected, interdependent and interactive world where the most basic ideas and assumptions about what it means to be a leader are being challenged.

To succeed in this new socio-economic order, organisations need to adopt best practice organisational leadership, developing not only a different quality of leader, but also developing collective leadership across the organisation.

Program features

Leaders attending this program will have the opportunity to build a leadership community and work together on action learning projects that will enhance their ability to apply leadership principles beyond the classroom.

Attendees will also have 24hr access to an online Learning Space through the Building Leadership Capital Portal where new ideas, challenges and learnings can be shared in forums, enabling peer learning to evolve. The Learning Space also provides links to relevant internet sites and current videos, as well as business and academic articles and resources to assist participants deepen and widen their understanding and application of the program content.

The program also provides a specifically designed 360-degree tool to support each individual's focus throughout the program, as well as coaching support throughout.

The program covers the five capitals of leadership:

- Relational Capital
- Resilience Capital
- Creative Capital
- Ethical Capital
- Social Capital
